Big Sky, Montana 2014
Trip Leader: Tracey Lee

Twenty-four very excited travelers headed to Big Sky, Montana on March 25th. We anticipated moderate temperatures and light dustings of fresh snow. We were not disappointed in the weather and were pleasantly surprised by the 3-8 inches of fresh snow we had each day/evening. There was plenty of mountain and snow for all types of skiers.

We met at Andiamo's Italian Grille in the village for a group dinner on Friday evening. Everyone was in agreement that the food was wonderful!

We gathered in Whiskey Jack's one evening to watch the Florida Gator basketball game and consume a few beverages and snacks.

One of the highlights of our trip was watching the dummy ski jump competition. The locals team up and compete to send a dummy down the mountain and up a ski jump hoping for mass destruction and good air.

We gathered on our final evening in one of the condos. We brought our leftover food and drink and talked about what a great week we had. Our one regret was not gathering in the condos earlier in the week.

We all look forward to getting together to view our photos and videos from the trip!
